American Correspondence. Bosrox, December 18, 1872. The sudden death of Horace Greeley has made a more profound impression upon the public mind than any event which has occurred for a long time. Many circumstances united to invest it with a tragic pathos. There is no question that the breaking down, first of mind, then of body, was the result of the anxiety and excitement of the Presidential campaign, followed by the disappointment of a mortifying defeat. The name of Greeley is to be added to the list of men who have died with broken hearts because they were foiled in their aspirations after the first office in the nation. But now that he is gone. all men are disposed to forget what was the grand error of his life, and to remember him as the great Editor, the bold reformer, the advocate Interior."

The nation has paid a just tribute to his best qualities and his honorable work. Perhaps a more impressive funeral pageant has never passed through the streets of New York than that which attended Horace Greeley's remains to the burial. Mr. Carter introduced the following amendment The city was in mourning; animosities were for gotten; the people's friend received from the general public the most touching tribute they could pay; and men of the highest station in all the professions were foremost to show their respect. President Grant performed a becoming not in a very graceful manner, by coming from the National Capital, and, without parade or ostentation, taking his place as a private citizen among the mourners. It is sadly to be lamented that the vast and growing power of the Press is used by bad men for the worst of ends. The growth and extension of a licentious literature have occasioned serious slarm to the friends of morals. The laws existing against it have been a dead letter. Emboldened by impunity, the base men who are eager to make gain from the debasement of others, have extended the demoralizing influence over the country. The minds of youth were poisoned; schools and seminaries were invaded by the blight and corruption introduced into carefully It seemed impossible to apply guarded homes. efficient measures for the suppression of this vile literature, so artfully was its manufacture and circulation carried on, and to such a degree did officers of the law connive at it. But one bold man determined to see what he could do. He was without money and influence. But he had pluck, and the conviction of a greatly needed work to be done. As he pushed on the crusade allies came to his help. A favoring sentiment was called out. Arrests of dealers, and seizures to the extent of tons of matter—papers, pictures, &c., were made in New York and elsewhere. The most hopeful result is the exposure of the surprising extent of the evil, and the awakening of the public mind to its enormity. It is to b hoped that the reform will go on to a much

A HISTORICAL BUILDING THREATENED. The proposed sale of the Old South Church in this city has called out remonstrances from all quarters. Your readers are aware that the ouilding is one of the most prized of historical nemorials in New England. Its ancient walls echoed to the appeals of a fervent patriotism in the days preceding the Revolution. During the War of Independence, it was used while the British occupied Boston, as a place of cavalry It has certain intimate associations also with the war of 1812. The great fire of a few weeks ago seemed at one time certain to destroy it, but it was saved by tremendous exer-tions, and New Englanders everywhere rejoiced then, when it appeared that the Society were entertaining a proposal to abandon it as a place of worship, and allow it to be destroyed. There was no excuse for it, the Society being in pos session of large property. The purpose was one justify the frequent accusation against the

Yankee, that he is utterly destitute of the centimen of reverence, and is "One that would peep and botanize

Upon his mother's grave," and upon a tempting offer would lease the snot for an herb garden. THE AMERICAN CENTENNIAL. Preparations are already under way for a grand celebration of the One Hundredth Anniversary of the nation's birth-day, in 1876. Philadelphia has very appropriately been chosen as the city where the national commemoration will take place. It is proposed, among other things, to hold a grand exhibition of American industry and art, together with a display of whatever will illustrate the resources of the country and its progress in the last hundred years. All the States are invited to appoint Commissioners, and to aid n the raising of the millions of capital required. If the idea can be properly carried out, it will afford a worthy celebration of a great occasion. The winter has set in with unusual severity but as yet we have not experienced any such storms as have, in England, made havoc of life and property on land and sea. The report of the Secretary of War shows that the Signal Office of the United States has been correct in sixty-nine per-cent. of the weather forecasts, and that no great storm has raged along the length of the sea poast or the lakes without fair and general premonition given at the great majority of the points endangered. The value of this service is daily be coming more apparent. The time will perhaps soon come when, by enlarging the range of observations, predictions of the weather can be made two or three days in advance.

The small-pox is making unusual ravages in the country. The newspapers naturally say intre-of it—each locality being anxious to keep its condition a secret. But it can not be concealed that in this city it is prevailing to a very alarm ing extent. Thousands of cases exist, and from here it has been carried far and wide over the State and through New England. DELTA.

HONOLULU, JANUARY 21, 1873. The steamship Nebraska arrived on the 17th, bringing San Francisco dates to the 9th. The Sugar market was very much depressed, with a stock of 23,000,000 lbs, on hand, equal to four months supply. The Refiners having lost heavily the last year, owing to competition among themselves, are evidently seeking to discourage the importation of choice grades. The San Francisco and Pacific Refinery has added largely to its capacity, and is running night and day. We need hardly look for any improvement for some months to come. At the present prices in San Fran cisco we would advise shipments to New Zealand, Sydney, British Columbia and Oregon. To the two ormer we think moderate shipments will pay better than to San Francisco; and to the latter, although governed by San Francisco prices, the various charges outside the duties are so much less as to afford quite a margin to shippers. The bark Delaware arrived to day from Burrard's
